dispute resolution

■ If you work within business, you'll probably already know that disagreements and disputes are bound to occur in some form or another.

However, dealing with them properly when they arise is critical when it comes to keeping things running smoothly. Effective dispute resolution requires trustworthy professionals, like us at Spencer Churchill, to guide, direct, and advise you as you go through the motions.

■ Explaining Dispute Resolution

Dispute Resolution refers to a wide range of methods, techniques, and processes that aim to resolve business or commercial disputes. They allow opposing parties to seek a common ground on which they can build the dispute and negotiate, without stressful court-imposed deadlines hanging over their heads.

However, if you have exhausted all your options when it comes to resolving the dispute outside of the courtroom, partaking in court proceedings can serve as an effective last resort.

Dispute resolution can take a few different forms when it comes to sorting out disagreements within your business.

Mediation is a form of alternative dispute resolution that involves a third-party mediator to talk you and your disputing party through the disagreement. If you are seeking a mutually beneficial conclusion to your disagreement which won't sacrifice your confidentiality or privacy, our professionals at Spencer Churchill can help, click here.

If Mediation is not right for you or your circumstances, Arbitration is a more formal and legally binding approach to take. This involves an external independent arbitrator who looks at the facts of the dispute and uses the evidence to come to a conclusion that is acceptable to both parties.
